

Neil Mundell-Phipps

management of staff, to liaising and influencing Board Directors and senior managers through the training process. I have been extremely lucky to experience on Global learning and development projects. My skill and knowledge set also includes talent management processes and succession planning along with one to one executive coaching and NLP sessions.

When working with clients the end goal is two-fold, how can I support unlocking individual's potential? and how will that impact on the individual's persona and organisations objectives?

I have a comprehensive understanding of all aspects of operational and staff management in various business sectors, such as Travel, Retail & Logistics, which when married together with my qualifications as a Certified NLP master practitioner, Time Line Therapy master practitioner, NLP master coach and master practitioner of hypnosis, make for some really pragmatic and impactful development solutions.

I'd describe myself as having great inter-personal skills (well, we all would wouldn't we?!), with an exceptionally positive attitude. I'm focussed on helping others to develop the skills that will enable them to enhance individual performance, business results, customer experience and therefore their organisation. I truly believe that development should be a holistic approach for all levels of employees supported by positive intent by companies and managers.

Colleague view ↴

"Neil is a very competent and professional learning specialist who has a passion for offering innovative and a consistently high level of management development interventions from junior to senior levels of leaders within complex organisational environments. He has an ability to identify and diagnose solutions which are both effective in driving high performance and in unlocking potential in others."

"I worked extensively with Neil while at B&Q and have maintained contact with him since then. What struck me about Neil, and has done so even more since our B&Q days, is his clear focus on delivering really effective L&D solutions that make a real difference. I also think he has an ability to face into issues and get to the heart of what is, or isn't happening that makes him an extremely effective business partner. I'd recommend him to anyone."
