A bit about me....

For over 30 years I have worked leaders and leadership teams in multi-national organisations, developing and managing global leadership programmes. In 2011 I began working as a Coach while leading a L&D team, on an ambitious project to embed a coaching culture across the UK, Ireland, and South Africa.

Throughout my career, I have experienced some fabulous coaching that has supported my own career development. I know that lasting results happen through relationships and through coaching.

I help people to understand and leverage their strengths; overcome limiting beliefs and develop the skills, capability, confidence, and relational skills to drive their continued development.

I am passionate about helping leaders to foster a culture of wellbeing for themselves and their teams and have collaborated with experts and leaders in this field to develop programmes that bring about real and sustainable change; from top Olympic athletes to Professors of sleep, all have come together to share their stories, their learning, and their recommendations with business colleagues.

Colleague View

"I can honestly say Natalie is the best L&D professional I have come across in many years of my HR career. First, she is a natural innovator - scanning horizons, suggesting and implementing new tools, providing customised creative solutions. Second, she is a real energy generator - Natalie can make things happen, working hard herself, but most importantly, inspiring others to act. Her enthusiasm is infectious, her project management and organisation skills are at the highest level."

Client View

"The impact on my personal and professional life has been phenomenal, and we've only just begun. Not only have our sessions refocused me, regained my passions and goals but they've also been responsible for me regaining confidence in myself and lifted me out of a place that I wasn't happy in being."
