Client View

I have known Sam for a number of years: she is extremely professional, organised and committed. She always delivers and ensures deadlines are achieved. Sam has a great range of knowledge and experience in the areas of people development, assessment and learning.

Sam Eddleston

A bit about me...

I have always been interested in people and what makes them tick – it's why I love being a psychologist. I started my career as a graduate in a business psychology consultancy and gained great experience in psychometrics, assessment and development, working both in the UK and internationally. I also discovered a passion for learning and development and spent 15 years in a variety of internal Learning and Development management roles. My achievements include an L&D start-up, implementation of various management and leadership development programmes, driving talent management activities and culture and values based work.

I joined Leading Edge as a Team Coach in 2013 and love my specialism in the design of our solutions and interventions. I also support activities to share and enhance our collective 'Learning Expertise' within our Leading Edge community.

My expertise comes from my ability to assimilate complex information and assimilate it into pragmatic Learning and Development solutions. I love working alongside our other Team Coaches and I am committed to providing clients with the best possible solutions that align the needs of their business with their culture and values. As a designer my top priority is ensuring our clients receive the most effective and fun learning possible (we all learn best when we're having fun!).
